Wisdom at Work

"Wisdom is not about just a few wise people but about the capacity of human communities to orient themselves around a living sense of the future that truly matters to them." Peter Senge

The 2011 SLaM Conference will explore what "Wisdom at Work" means, and why it is important in workplaces today. A narrow focus on short-term profit is not enough to serve the long-term interests of our society, our planet or even our organisations. The concept of "wisdom" offers a perspective that is broader, more inclusive, fairer and more in harmony with the earth.

But if wisdom is important, how does it emerge? What processes can be used to foster it? What conditions can create the space for it?

SLaM invites leaders, managers, consultants, workers, professionals, academics and interested individuals to be seekers of wisdom at our conference.

Presenting:

Dr Alan Briskin

Co-author of The Power of Collective Wisdom and the Trap of Collective Folly, and founder of US-based Wisdom Collective.

Peter and Alison Yiangou

Founders of UK-based Self Knowledge Global Responsibility Project, whose aim is to combine the personal and global, contemplation and action, drawing on the wisdom texts of Rumi and Ibn'Arabi.

Dr Steve Taylor

Playwright and academic in performance and the arts in management education, from Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Massachusetts.

Early Bird registrations are available up to 30th June.
